Two Titles from the Linacre Centre on the Debate about Euthanasia in Clinical Practice

Euthanasia and Clinical Practice: Trends, principles and alternatives. The Report of a Working Party

ISBN 0 906561 03 5. viii + 88 pp. Reprinted 1984. £3.95 + 0.35 p/p

From reviews of the Report when first published in 1982:

"There is a good discussion and some fine arguments upon when treatment is or is not obligatory, the burdensomeness of treatment, and the parent's right to refuse . . . it provides much food for thought, and is to be recommended to all those, whether Christian or not, who care for children."
Archives of Disease in Childhood

"It is a worthy addition to the literature on the subject and is a most valuable book."
Crucible

"It deserves to be read by all those who have an interest in this area and to be the focus of much debate and questioning." Peter Byrne
The Heythrop Journal

" . . . the report is a challenging document . . . Its appearance could hardly be more timely, and the expertise of the members of the working party ensures that it makes rewarding study. It is much to be welcomed, and I hope it will be widely read and carefully discussed." Gerard J Hughes
The Modern Churchman

"This work is singularly adapted to the reading of medical personnel, whether in hospital or general practice . . . this is the effect of a happy combination of the knowledge contributed by the medical and para-medical members of the Committee and the influence of others including lawyers and philosophers in giving clarity and logical structure to the presentation of the whole discussion." David Braine
The Month

"All concerned with the care of the dying will find this slim book a stimulating and rewarding review."
The New England Journal of Medicine
