The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy continues to explore the shared themes and concerns of philosophy and the medical sciences. Not since Galen's time has the contact between medicine and philosophy been so widespread; the journal seeks to meet the challenge of this dialogue by providing a forum for philosophers, medical practitioners, educationists, and humanists to examine the problems and controversies stimulated by the engagement of these two disciplines.

The range of issues having philosophical import for medical research and practice is enormous. New developments in medical technology and expertise frequently create scientific and humanistic dilemmas, and medical decision-making always involves philosophical presuppositions. Moreover, the concerns of philosophy often converge with those of medicine, as philosophers attempt to understand the nature of knowledge and the human condition. The purpose of the journal is to analyze this multifaceted relationship and to raise its discussion to a responsible and intellectually rigorous level.

JOURNAL OF Applied
Philosophy

This journal provides a focus for philosophical research with a direct bearing on areas of practical concern which are capable of being illuminated by the critical analytical approach characteristic of philosophy, and by direct consideration of questions of value. These areas include law, politics, economics, science-policy, medicine and education, but are not confined to these. The journal, published under the auspices of the Society for Applied Philosophy, aims to foster and promote philosophical work which is intended to make a constructive contribution to problems in these areas and to the identification, justification and discussion of values capable of transcending narrow or local interests.
