CARE OF THE DYING

Dr Cicely Saunders

This publication comprises a series of seven articles written by Dr Cicely Saunders, medical director of St Christopher's Hospice.

The series opens with two articles discussing in depth the problem of euthanasia. Mental Distress in the Dying presents an analysis of the various ways in which a patient may react to terminal illness and the different forms his fears and anxieties may take. In 'Should a Patient Know?' Dr Saunders assesses the various situations in which telling a patient the truth can benefit or harm. The Last Achievement includes a case history of one patient whose acceptance of his illness brought out the best in him and perfectly completed his life.

The series also includes two articles on terminal cancer: Control of Pain in Terminal Cancer in which Dr Saunders describes both the principle and the practice of her cardinal rule for control of pain, and The Nursing of Patients Dying of Cancer which gives detailed suggestions for coping with the particular difficulties of this illness.

This booklet (price 50p) is one of a series of Nursing Times publications available from bookshops. For a full list of current titles, write to Anne Jamieson, Macmillan Journals Ltd, 4 Little Essex Street, London WC2R 3LF
